The first documented sinking of a ship by a whale and a harrowing account by the ship's first mate of the survivors is by Owen Chase. Chase is the author of the book The Wreck of the Whaleship Essex, published in 1821. Chase's narrative was later used by Herman Melville to write Moby Dick. Chase was born in Nantucket, Massachusetts, and sought a traditional career as a whaling captain however at age 22 while serving as first mate of the Essex his ship was sunk in a horrific unprecedented attack by a sperm whale.

In 1820, Owen Chase's whaling ship, the Essex, was cruising off the coast of Chile when Owen's first child, Phebe Ann, was born back in Nantucket. By this time, Owen had become familiar with the ship, which had been sailing for twenty years when he went out as first mate. The ship is described in its original condition.

The Essex first mate, Owen Chase, wrote about the incident in his book Narrative of the Most Extraordinary and Distressing Shipwreck of the Whaleship Essex. This book was published in 1821 and inspired Herman Melville to write Moby Dick.
